

KNOWLEDGE MEETS NATURE

The new building refers to the surroundings by adapting heights and borders of Asplund's Library's wings and the Folksam building. Four floors on the eastside and 9 floors on the westside are creating a vertical angle. It nestles snakelike around an internal courtyard, which allows to get natural light inside, up to the icon and upwards to the Observatory Hill.

A flat building touches and connects Asplund's Library softly on the westside. This part takes up the new main entrance from Odengatan and park side, the news- and browsing areas on two floors and is forming a smart overlookable entrance-space.

The internal connections of the new building are parallel to the axis of Asplund's Library and beside the internal courtyard, so that function, survey in all directions and connection is guaranteed.

As an extension of this new axis there is a bridge-connection to the Diligntia building over Gyldéngatan simply possible. Functions are very simple and overlookable oriented.

The restaurant is outsourced and placed in the Bazaar Building, south oriented to the park and waterbassin. A bigger and external Bookshop is placed on the same level in the Northern Bazaar wing.

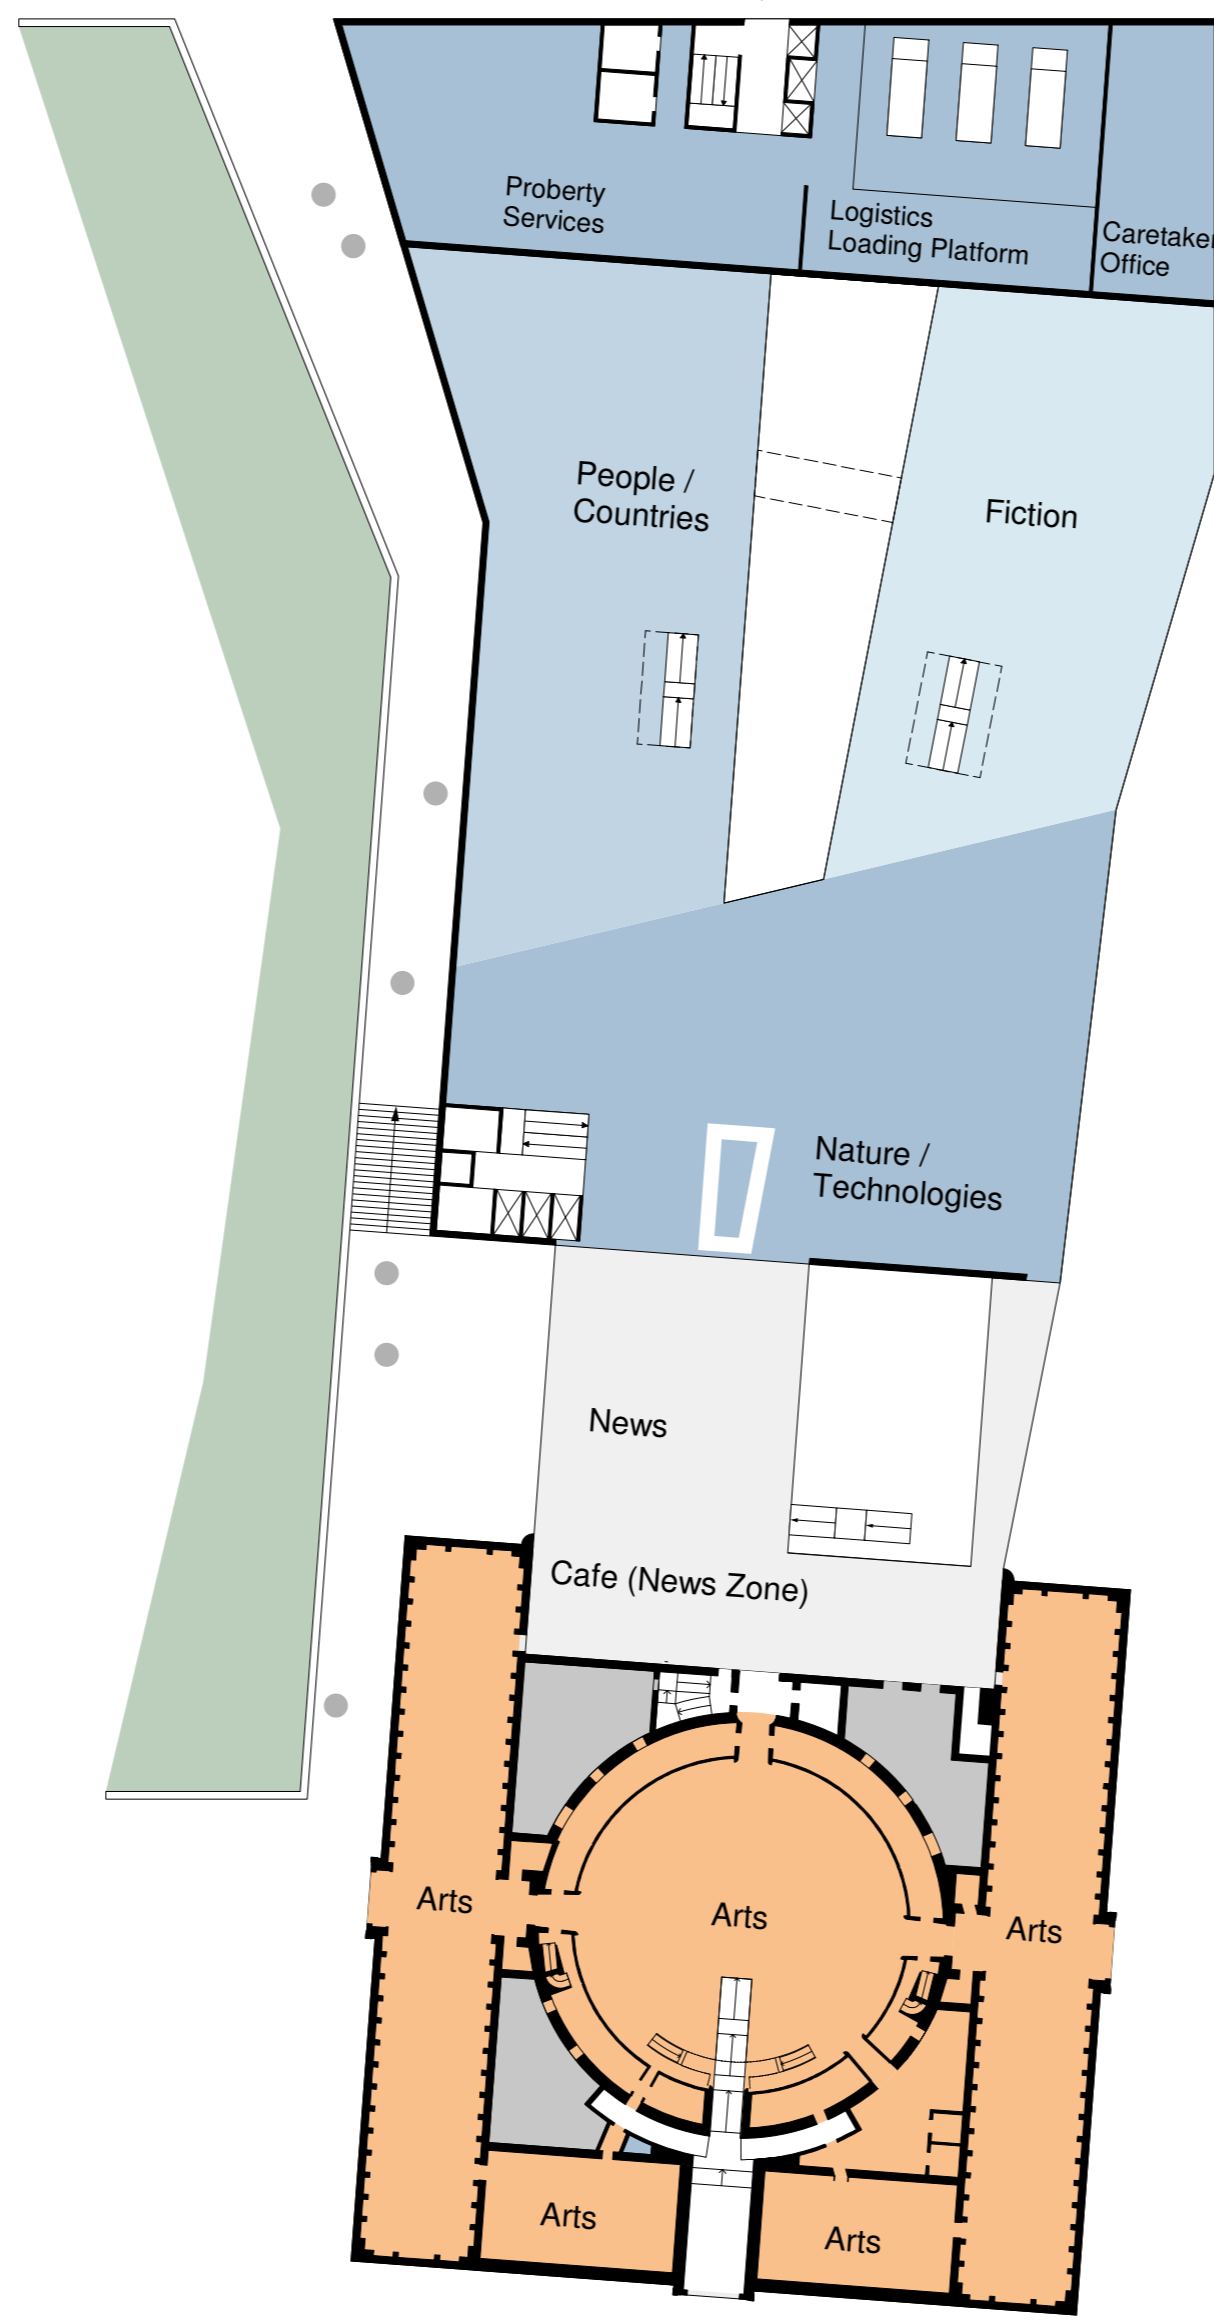

The U-shape of the ground plan originates a courtyard, where visitors have the opportunity to use the terrace beside the café. The new building arises out of the Observatory hill and has a green roof, so that it is united with nature.

Visitors can walk from the roof to the top of the hill. A second Footpath is crossing the Site between Building and Observatory-Hill from the Park westwards to the Gyldéngatan. It protects nature of the Observatory hill against the street.

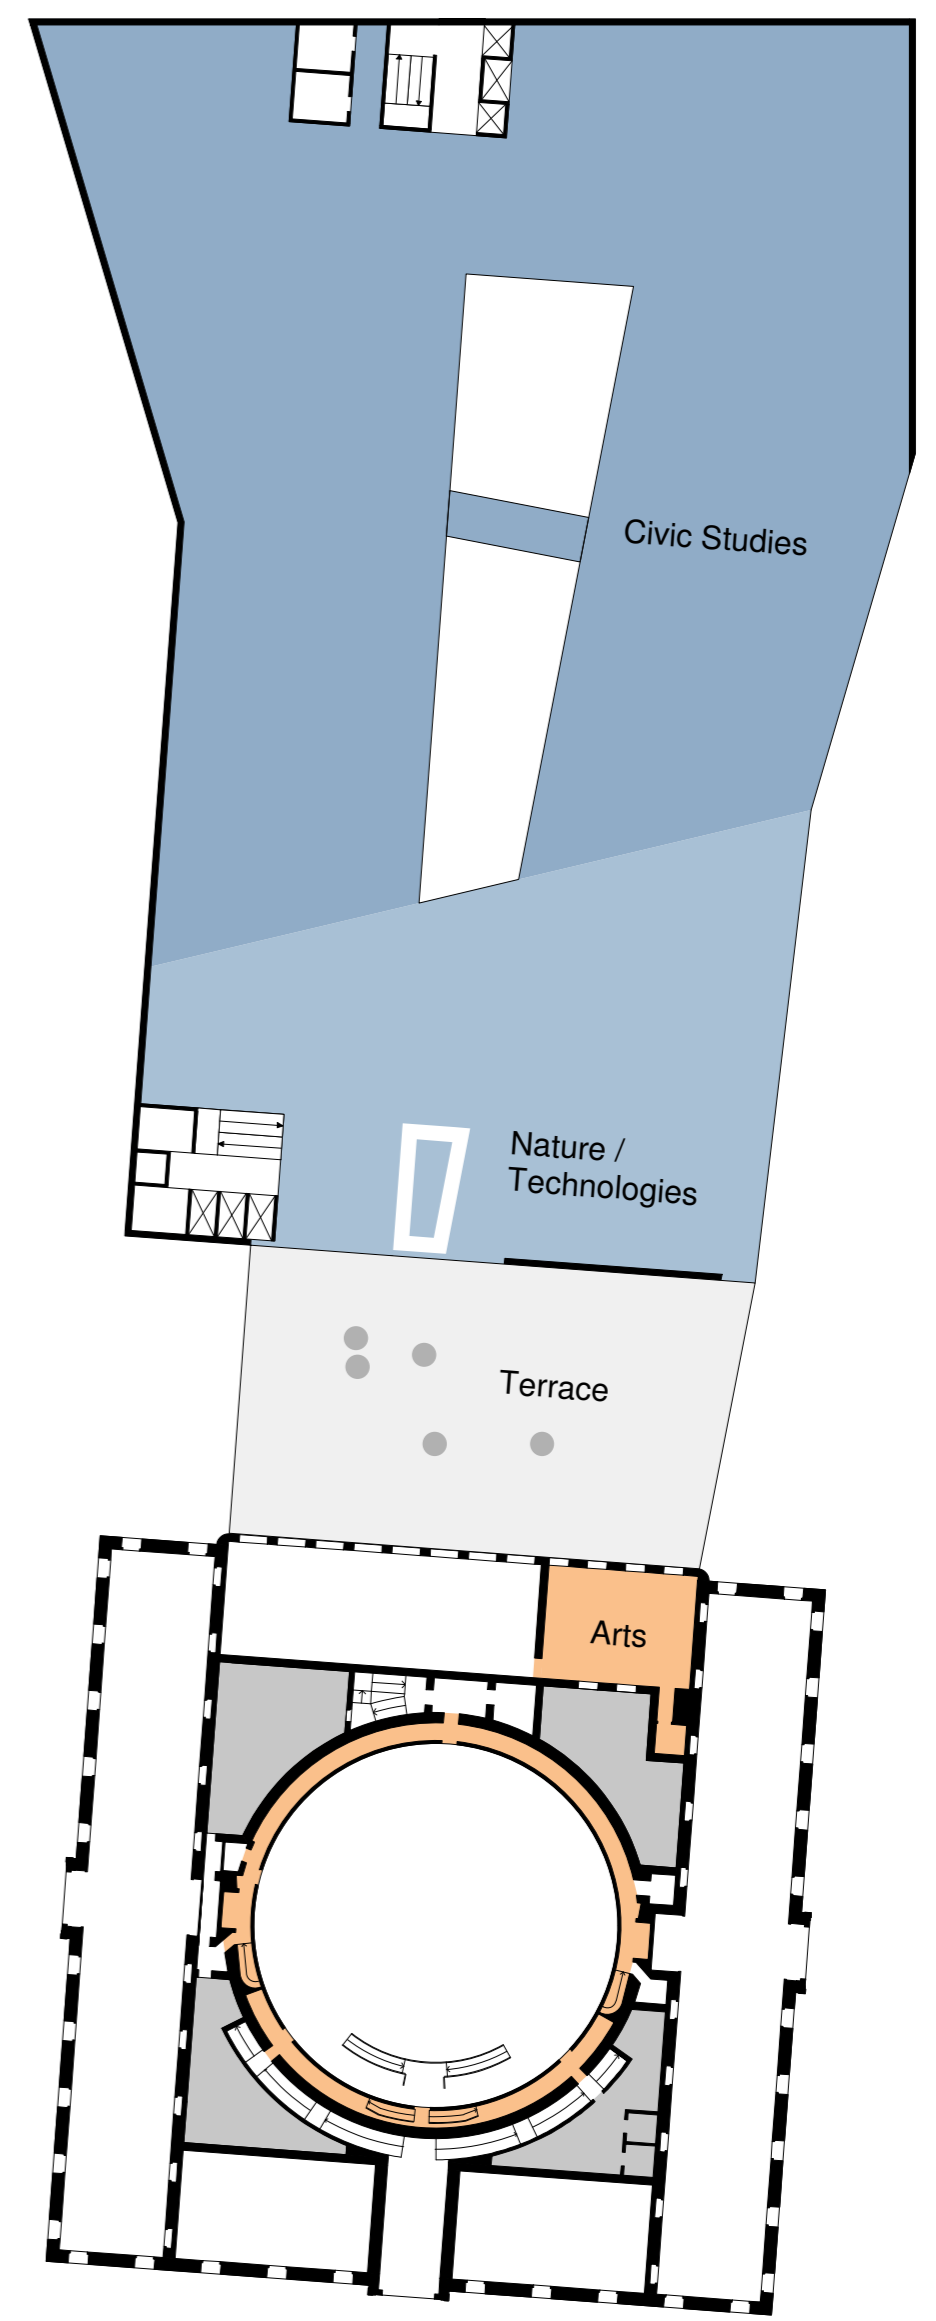

The structure of the new library will attract people not only because of the media, but also to experience nature and to get in contact with others in the café, the news and learning zones.
